

Satellite Radio is a valid product. There is no obvious reason to limit it's content to national vs. local content. Satellite TV is not limited and has not made impacts in local markets that are significant enough to eliminate local stations. Satellite Radio is one more competitor in an open market, and to discriminate against it would be against the free market economy principles that business is based on in the US. It is too bad that when an industry perceives a new competitor, it seeks to clip its wings vs. engage in true market competition.
